matter calls for investigation:

Within the last week William Neely, son of John T. Neely, Solebury Township, in this country, returned home. He had fived in Southampton Country, Virginis, several years before the war, which found him there. He managed to keep out of the military service of the Confederacy, but served some time in the Commissary Department.

He declared that while General Butler was in command of the Department of Virginis, he (Butler) traded beef to the rebels for cotton, two pounds of the former for one of the latter. Mr. Neely further says that he discharged one cargo of beef and loaded the vessel with cotton, and sent it down the river to Norfolk. As this took pince during the administration of General Butler, it must have been done with his knowledge and consent, for a subordinate would hardly dare trade so openly with the enemy without the sanction of his commanding officer. Of course this beef helped feed the rebel army, and kept the war going on, that men might grow rich. This is a grave charge, and some steps should be taken to discover whether General Butler is guilty. Our informant is a gentleman who had it directly from Mr. Neely. This looks like giving aid and comfort to the enemy.

(From the Richmond Times, December 11.) From the Richmend Times, December II.]

The blood-hounds of Zion bayed loud and flercely from their lofty pulpits on Thanksglving day. It was a national Sabbath set apart for prayers to God for the return of peace to a land desolated, scarred and torn by civil war, yet hundreds of the ministers of the Prince of Peace made that sacred day hideous with their wolfish howls for blood. They stood at their altars like those flerce Roman priests who propitiated the sensual deities of mythology by the slaughter of whole hecatombs of sheep and oxen. The Washington correspondent of the

New York Herald is responsible for the following:

A rich interview took place between the President and Senator Summer on the evening after the message was read in Congress. It lasted for several hours. There were three or four persons present. Summer is represessented as having been very nervous. Some of those present thought he would go into affeat two or three different periods of the consultation. At any rate his actions justified the application of the term of being a monomaniae in regard to the negro. Finding himself unable to move the President, he finally broke out as follows:

Mr. President, I notice that the white rebels down in Alabama and other localities in the South are talking very strong against the Union, and denomening it in strong terms; can you not do something to put a stop to it?

The President coolly replied: I see, Mr. Summer, that the white rebels in Boston are talking against the Union. Can't you put a stop to it there?

This confused the Senator for a short time, but after twisting in his seat for a short time he again broke out as follows; Mr. Johnson, the reports from the South show that the white rebels in Boston are insulting the freedmen. Don't you think that Congress onght to do something to correct this evil?

The President, with a significant wink to the other gentlemen present, replied: "Mr. Summer, I notice by the papers that the white rebels in Cinemant have been recently insulting white people there and knocking down one or two. Can't. Congress do the White House was of short duration after the White House was of short duration and and active Joint, and in the Field before Petersburg and Richmond." It is needless to add that the stay of the Missachnsetts negro monomaniac at the White House was of short duration after that thrust.
